

JUSTIN R. WHITE

Partner, Casey, Quirk & Associates

Justin is a partner with Casey Quirk. His consulting work has included a wide array of assignments focused on business strategy, organizational design, global distribution, investment capability assessment, and product development. Justin has been in the investment management industry for nearly 14 years. He is based in Darien.

Justin has advised both traditional and alternative managers regarding the global institutional, retail, and high-net-worth markets. Justin has led many of Casey Quirk's retail-oriented projects, including those focused on the distribution of intermediary-sold mutual funds, ETFs, and retirement products. He leads the firm's thought leadership and advisory work regarding the U.S. defined contribution marketplace, and is a member of the Profit Sharing/401k Council of America's research committee.

Prior to joining Casey Quirk, Justin was a senior market research analyst at Fidelity Investments Institutional Services, where he performed analyses for marketing, distribution, finance, and business planning issues for Fidelity and its related businesses. Justin also worked as a wholesaler at Fidelity, selling mutual funds, 401(k) programs, and other retirement products.

Justin received his master's degree in business administration from the Stern School of Business at New York University, and earned a bachelor's degree in economics and political science from the University of Rochester.
